Education, Training, Licensure

While living in El Paso, Texas, I received my BS degree in Criminal Justice at the University of Texas, El Paso, with the initial plan to follow up with a law degree. Life circumstances compelled me to make a change, therefore, I entered the University of Texas, Austin social work master's program at the UT El Paso campus, earning my MSSW in 1993. After engaging in advanced clinical studies and supervised clinical training for a few years I earned my Texas LCSW in 1997.

My academic training included a broad range of therapies such as family systems theory and practice, cognitive behavioral, and psychodynamic. Clinical skills outside of academia include further training and clinical practice in hospice and palliative care, grief and bereavement, trauma, CBT, DBT, mindfulness practices, crisis/ natural disaster response, and motivational interviewing.

I am a licensed independent social worker in the state of Washington. My license number is LW 60601839.

Therapeutic Approach

In counseling, I am involved in helping you to identify your treatment needs, by providing information, collaborative exploration of ideas, and strategies to support you in finding solutions that work for you in your situation.

I use a combination of CBT, emotional regulation strategies, mindfulness practices, and interpersonal informed therapies. CBT explores your thoughts, beliefs, values, and how those may be influencing your behaviors and emotions. Mindfulness is about being present in the moment without judgement. With practice, mindfulness skills can assist you with developing the ability to observe your thinking and emotions, become less reactive, and more responsive to your life experience. Interpersonal therapies focus on the value of the relationship that evolves between therapist and client and also helps to increase interpersonal effectiveness in relationships. I utilize therapeutic grief counseling if a client is bereaved over the loss of a loved one, a pet, or is struggling with unresolved grief issues over loss not necessarily related to death.

Therapeutic Process

The initial assessment session will involve development of an individualized treatment plan with goals towards addressing the problematic issues you have identified. Issues regarding stress, family conflict, difficulties from your developmental / social history, marital problems, grief and loss issues, substance abuse history, and struggles with life transitions are common themes of the assessment process. We will reach an agreement about your treatment focus before continuing with therapy.

During therapy, we will explore your strengths, beliefs, values, coping strategies, and behaviors that helped you gain the resilience to cope with past issues. Therapy may involve helping you identify barriers to change, develop and implement more effective strategies to promote change. Therapy may involve engagement in problem solving, healthier decision making, and healthier conflict resolution to assist in enhancing quality of life. I may request that you practice skills, read, and/or engage in other activities between sessions.

Therapy is an individual choice. You may choose another therapy option, such as another counselor, support groups, seeking self help resources, and alternative modes of treatment. You and I will typically meet weekly initially for 50 to 60 minutes. Frequency and duration of sessions can vary, depending on your situation. Some clients require only a few sessions to meet their goals while others may benefit from long term counseling support.

Be advised that some issues result in physical conditions and medical consultation may be advised. My therapeutic approach involves the awareness of the connection of mind, body, and spirit and I am open to exploring physical concerns or chronic pain, that contribute to your level of distress.

Risks and Benefits of Therapy

A significant benefit of active participation in counseling often includes an improved ability to manage and cope with interpersonal relationships. Benefits of therapy may also include a greater understanding of personal goals and values that can enhance your quality of life, can also provide solutions to problems, and reduce feelings of emotional distress.

It is important to understand that therapy treatment often requires one to confront unpleasant life circumstances, aspects of self, painful history, and difficult emotions. You may experience uncomfortable feelings of sadness, guilt, frustration, loneliness, or helplessness. In your work to gain potential benefits through counseling and resolve issues, therapy may require you to make changes you may not have expected nor originally intended.

Record Keeping

I am required by law to keep records of our sessions together. To facilitate this progress, I will take notes during the session to ensure accuracy. All information is stored in our electronic health record. Information you share with me and any record of that information will be held in strict confidence. I cannot disclose any information about you to anyone else, including the fact that you are in treatment, unless you give me permission, or unless I am required to do so by law.

Professional Consultation

I participate in a consultation group with the clinicians at New Growth on a biweekly basis and I reserve the right to contact other professionals for consultation as needed. In consultation, I do my best to avoid revealing the identity of my clients. I will not share client names or other identifying information. All consultants are bound by law to keep any information confidential.

Professional Boundaries

I abide by the Code of Ethics of my discipline which precludes dual roles. Counselors are obligated to establish and maintain appropriate professional boundaries with clients. These relationships do not allow for business, social, sexual, or any other dual relationship that impairs clinical objectivity, effectiveness, or client welfare, which includes present and past clients, and, in some cases, client's close friends and family members.

The size of our community creates situations where you and I may be present in social situations or other places outside of my office. Due to confidentiality, I will not acknowledge the existence of the relationship outside of the therapy session unless initiated by you.

Personal Conduct

Everyone is expected to conduct themselves in a responsible manner. A session should not be held when anyone is under the influence of a nonprescription drug, alcohol, or medications that are a barrier to the therapeutic process.

Limits of Services

I do not make assessments of fitness for duty, for work, workers compensation, disability claims, legal/courts, forensic, substance use, or predictive assessments of any type. I do not serve as an advocate on issues, act as an expert witness, or go to court as your advocate. I do not assess fitness for custody or make recommendations regarding parenting, guardianship, or fitness of a parent or person to live independently.

Legal Proceedings

Due to the nature of the therapeutic process and the fact that it could involve making a full disclosure regarding many matters of a personal and confidential nature, it is agreed that should there be legal proceedings (such as, but not limited to, divorce, custody disputes, injuries, or lawsuits), neither you (client('s), or your attorney(s), nor to anyone action on your behalf will call on me to testify in court or at any other proceedings, nor will a disclosure of psychotherapy or counseling records be requested. Considering the above exclusions, upon your request, I will release a summary of your sessions to any agency/person you specify, unless releasing the information might be harmful in any way or violates the privacy of another person. If subpoenaed or ordered by an authorized court of law, health care professionals may be required to release confidential information. Time for preparation and/or attendance in court will be charged as permitted by law.
